

Consolidation of media power in the hands of a few corporate conglomerates is bad for America. The more varied the opinion and content seen and heard on the public airwaves, the better it is for democracy.